Month's Postponement Granted As Zoning Plan Study Continues

Carmel's fight to keep commercialism from creeping in its front door had still another month in which to gain further momentum as the result of a postponement ordered Tuesday afternoon by the Monterey county planning commission.

At the request of Adolph Hanke, one of the leaders seeking a restricted residential zoning ordinance for territory surrounding Carmel, the commission granted a delay in the matter in the hope that an amicable solution might yet be reached.

J. A. Bardin, former superior court judge and one of the leading attorneys in the county, attacked in no uncertain terms, the attempt to commercialize the area adjacent to Carmel.

"It is a pity that Carmel which has become world famous through avoiding commercialism should face the fate of hundreds of other communities by having an auto camp at its front door," Judge Bardin told the commission. "I believe that if the commission allows a commercialized area around Carmel they will be planting a seed for future discord in matters of restricted zoning."

"Carmel wants to be left alone. It wishes to bask in its fog and its sunshine and live quiet, secluded life. Why should its beauty be now threatened by commercialism? It appears to me as an outsider that a great error that will always be regretted may be committed unless the entire problem is given careful and a thorough study."

At the beginning of the hearing, a number of protests were read by Carmel Martin, chairman of the commission. The protests were from Paul Flanders of the Carmel Land company; Willis Walker, owner of property near the Mission; Lang Realty company, objecting to a residential zone in LaLoma Terrace and Wells Fargo bank as trustees entered a protest against zoning in Carmel Woods.

Hanke told the commission that he requested the postponement in order that these protests might be discussed informally. He said that there was still hope of some sort of a settlement.

Hanke then asked the opinion of the commission toward the possibility of moving the proposed state highway some 500 feet back from its present location. By so doing, he explained, the stretch of highway near Hatton Fields would be hidden from the view of Carmel property owners.

Conover was requested by the commission to investigate into this possibility and to discuss it with the state highway commission as well as Flanders of the Carmel Land company.

The next hearing of the commission at which the matter of zoning will again be taken up will be held on Tuesday January 31.

Gordy Campbell Honored At Dinner Given Here

More than 35 prominent Carmel residents gathered last Friday night to honor Gordy Campbell for his fine work as a quarterback on the Stanford university team.

Mayor John Catlin who acted as toastmaster praised Campbell for his splendid fighting spirit and pointed to him as an outstanding example of the American youth of today. Similar testimonials were given by everyone of those present. At the end of the dinner, Campbell was presented with a gift as a token of remembrance of the affair. Those present included: Frederick Bechdolt, Chas. Van Riper, Paul Flanders, Ray Brownell, Don Staniford, Talbert and Winsor Josselyn, Frank Thompson, Don Hale, Hal Bragg, Tom Warren, Billy Heron, Ted Martin, Ted and Dale Leidig, Bill Staniford, Willard Whitney, Elmer Cox and many others.

Stanford Chaplain To Deliver Sermon Here

The Rev. D. Charles Gardner, chaplain of Stanford university, will deliver the sermon on Sunday, New Year's Day, at All Saints Church, it was announced today by the Rev. Austin B. Chinn.

Rev. Mr. Gardner, who has a national reputation as a preacher, will deliver the sermon starting at 11 o'clock. Carmel residents are invited to attend the services.

Music Society Luncheon

The weekly membership-drive luncheon of the Board of the Carmel Music Society will be at La Playa Hotel on Wednesday, January 4, at one o'clock instead of on Friday.

Noted Army General Spending Visit Here

General Joseph L. Kuhn, retired army officer, was in Carmel this week spending the holidays at the home of Col. James Parker on Scenic Drive.

General Kuhn was military attache in Berlin prior to the war and, following the United States entrance, he commanded an American division in France. He now makes his home in San Diego.

Phil Coddell, manager of the Carmel Theatre, left this week for San Francisco where he is being transferred in a similar capacity with another theatre.

An interesting Christmas day party was given Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Drew Chidester on San Antonio street. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Karl Ohnesorg, Edward Weston, Captain Henry Odell, Stanley Wood and several others.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin James and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, who have been making their home in Carmel for the past six months, left Carmel Tuesday to sail from San Francisco on the Chichibu Maru for an extended trip around the world. They expect to return here again at the beginning of summer.

Million Dollars To Be Put Up For Highway Work Near Carmel

When the state legislature meets in Sacramento next month, it will appropriate over a million dollars for road work to be done near here and on the Carmel-San Simeon highway, it was announced this week.

Approximately $1,378,000 will be allocated by the legislature for the Carmel-San Simeon road. This appropriation will provide for work done by private contract and for the maintenance of two convict camps that are employed on the project.

In addition to this sum, $101,000 is to be allocated for grading and surfacing one and five tenths miles of highway between Carmel and the Carmel river and for a new bridge over the river. There is also an appropriation of $170,000 that is to be made by the state for the grading of four and seven tenths miles from Pfeiffer's resort to the Molera ranch.

According to E. H. Tickle, senator-elect from Carmel who will sit in the legislature for the first time next month, there is little doubt that these appropriations will be allocated. The appropriations were set and approved by the state highway commission.

According to Senator Tickle, allocation of the million-dollar fund by the legislature almost guarantees the completion of the Carmel-San Simeon highway within the next two years. This is one of the few sections of the state, it is reported, which will receive such large road construction appropriation during the coming year.

McMillan, Federal Loan Official Talks Over Plan To Aid State

The man on whose recommendation will depend whether or not California will receive its requested federal loan of twenty million dollars was a visitor in Carmel over the holidays.

Coming directly from Washington where he holds the post of field representative with the Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation, A. W. McMillan, stopped here for several days and then left yesterday morning for Sacramento to confer with Governor James Rolph.

Before leaving, however, McMillan told the Pine Cone that if California's need for a loan was as imperative as it was outlined, he would recommend federal aid.

He indicated that twenty million dollars was beyond the figure that could be loaned out and expressed the opinion that five million dollars would be the sum more likely to be decided upon.

Of the state loan, Monterey county has already applied for $239,850 which will be allocated to the various communities. Carmel has also asked for $22,500 to take care of its own needy people and unemployed.

According to McMillan, Monterey county as well as the state has figured to obtain money to take care of its needy people for a period of six months. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, however, will not make loans for such a long period of time.

Should California receive a federal loan it would be only for a period extending from the first of the year to February 28. He explained that it has been the policy of the corporation not to make loans for any greater length of time, although further extensions can be made later.

The loan Monterey county and the state would receive will not have to be paid by tax payers but will be taken out of the annual appropriation made by the federal government for state highway work.

Woman's Club Planning Open House New Year's

Following an annual custom, the Carmel Woman's Club will hold "Open House" on New Years afternoon in the Girl Scout House from 4 to 6. All Carmel residents are invited to drop in for friendly exchange of greetings and good wishes. The hostesses will be Mrs. Karl Rendtorff, the president, Miss Elizabeth Armstrong and Miss Agnes Williston, assisted by the members of the Board of Directors. Visitors to Carmel will be welcome.

Funeral Services Held For 11-Year-Old Youth

Funeral services were held Monday morning at the San Carlos church for Anthony DeAmaral, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DeAmaral of Carmel Woods.

The boy who was a student at Sunset School had been ill for sometime and was removed to the Monterey hospital where he died on Saturday morning. A mass for the repose of his soul was said at San Carlos church and was followed with burial at the Monterey cemetery.

Handsome Holiday Window at Garage

One of the most attractive holiday window displays being shown in Carmel this year is that of the Carmel Garage where unusual pains have been taken to attract the eye and to carry on the Christmas spirit.

The window walls are covered with real Christmas tree branches, while in the center of the room is a mammoth Xmas tree beautifully trimmed and decorated. A square retaining wall of tree trunks surrounds the tree, and the intervening space is bowered in branches.

Across the front of a couple of tree trunks, the words "Merry Christmas" appear in artificial snow. Brilliant illumination complements the display.

Del Monte New Year's Frolic Best in History

There will be a special significance to Del Monte's New Year's eve party this year. Not just another blow-out, the annual jamboree next Saturday at Del Monte augurs to be one of the liveliest celebrations in the history of the hotel.

The large number of advance reservations speaks well for the attendance at the forthcoming frolic. Many merrymakers from San Francisco and as far south as Los Angeles will seek out the enchanted dancing room for the gay evening, hotel officials state. The fact that two polo teams arrive then for the Del Monte New Year's 12-goal polo tournament will account for many southern folk, it is said. It is also reported that at least one team from Hollywood will help make the holidays festive at Del Monte.

Reservations for Del Monte's big New Year's Eve party are being received at the hotel.

The Village News Reel

Mr. and Mrs. Howell Byrnes held an "at home" at their Carmel home in Hatton Fields on Christmas day, having entertained a number of relatives over the holidays.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Lanz of Palo Alto came to Carmel over the vacation and were joined later by their son, Henry, Jr., who is a freshman at Stanford University.

The Junior members of the Manzanita club of Carmel held the annual Christmas dance at Pine Inn last Tuesday night. A dance on the same order was given last year by the junior members of some other organization.

The Monterey Peninsula Orchestra will repeat its last concert-rehearsal that was given at the Denny-Watrous Gallery December 17, at the San Carlos Hotel in Monterey on Saturday night, January 7. Marlyn Doty, ten year old violinist, acclaimed as one of the greatest of the prodigies, will be the soloist again.

Mrs. Charles A. Edwards of Carmel is spending the Christmas holidays with her daughter and son in law Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Blunck of San Francisco.

A Christmas party was given by the Phil Coddell's to a number of friends including among them Harold Kastchinski, Mildren McDonough, Madeline McDonough and many others who were in Carmel visiting from San Francisco.

Miss Eleanor Watson spent the holidays with her parents Major and Mrs. Lee Watson of Carmel, down from Dominican Convent where she has been attending school.

Thirsty Carmel Smacks Lips As Still On Boat Sends Out Fumes

Artistic Carmel blushingly awoke this week, sniffed at the intoxicating fumes brought by a north wind and wondered after all, if Santa Claus had not been too generous in spreading the yuletide cheer.

The fumes which for several days have been the cause of many parched throats, come not from an unlocked cellar. But rather, from a still operating just outside the Carmel city limits—or to be exact, 12 miles out at sea!

According to information reaching the village police department, a large rum ship fully equipped to manufacture alcohol and beer, has been plying its way just off shore from Carmel.

The rum ship, it is understood, is able to manufacture a tremendous amount of intoxicating beverages without interference from government cutters. The liquor is packed in the holds of the ship and on foggy nights and convenient occasions is sent out by fast motor boats.

Several Monterey wholesale purveyors of the prohibited liquid have admitted purchases of large supplies from the floating still for the domestic trade. It is reported that as long as the rum boats stay outside the three mile limit, government cutters can only sit patiently and inhale the fumes without being able to interfere.

The rum boat under local surveillance is one of several operating off the Pacific coast and said to be owned by the same liquor syndicate which operate over 500 alcohol stills in California alone.

Postoffice Praised For Quick Handling of Mail

Through a plan perfected by Postmaster William Overstreet thirty days in advance, Christmas mail was handled this year quicker and better than at any other time in the past.

Despite the terrific increase in the handling of incoming and outgoing mail, there was virtually no delay and waiting on the part of Carmel residents. During the holiday week, work was provided for six local men, all with families.

According to the figures of Postmaster Overstreet, the volume of incoming mail was five per cent off the usual postal receipts for this year. The outgoing mail was ten per cent off.

Nevertheless, Postmaster Overstreet disclosed that this year more articles purchased in Carmel were sent out than at any other Christmas period. This knowledge, he said was ascertained from the local store labels on hundreds of holiday gifts.

Christian Science Churches

"God" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, January 1, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon will include the following from the Bible: "Know ye that the Lord he is God; it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations" (Ps. 100:3-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, combine as one, — and are the Scriptural names for God. All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are His attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love" (p. 275).

Vienna's Singing Boys To Be Heard Here

The Vienna Saengerknaben—or the Singing Boys of Vienna—who will engage the attention of music lovers when they give their performances of operettas, choral works and songs at Sunset School auditorium on Saturday evening, January 14, are members of a musical hierarchy that was founded in 1498 by the imperial decree of Emperor Maximilian when a group of boy singers were ordered to sing a daily mass under the auspices of the Court Orchestra of Vienna. For nearly 500 years, up to the present time, the traditions of this organization have been kept intact and their ideals inviolate. Under the care and tutelage of the State, their reason for being has been to sing fine and religious—without profession—musical works—choral, operatic or a need for glory.

Raids Planned as Authorities Warn Against Slot Machines

Unless slot machines now being operated in Carmel and other Monterey county communities are removed within the next few weeks they all will be confiscated by county authorities and the owners charged with violating the state gambling law.

This was the order issued this week by District Attorney Russell Scott and Sheriff Carl H. Abbott in an attempt to remove every gambling device and slot machine from the county.

Recently, Scott and Abbott issued a similar warning and all slot machines were withdrawn from restaurants and cigar stands by their owners. Many of these machines, it is understood, have been placed in circulation again despite the ban put on them by county authorities.

Elimination of the slot machines, however, may not be as easy a measure as anticipated. Owners of the slot machines, it has been reported, have hired a well known Monterey attorney to defend them on the grounds that they are within the law in operating them.

Both Abbott and Scott are firm in their stand that the machines must go and will follow up their warning with a series of raids throughout the county. While there is no county ordinance prohibiting slot machines, they are made illegal through a state wide law.

In Carmel, slot machines prove a fascinating indoor sport during the winter months with many writers and prominent residents spending their nickels and dimes on them. It was indicated that several operators of the machines in the village will protest against any interference on the part of county authorities.

"Macaire" Famous Stevenson Play To Be Seen Here Again Tonight

By Winsor Josselyn

Opening last night, and being repeated tonight, the Stevenson play "Macaire" shows that not only can Carmel have a brisk dramatic year but can end that year with just the right touch.

It's a holiday production, and doubly appropriate because the proceeds go to the Employment Fund. When you can trade fifty cents, or one dollar, for entertainment such as "Macaire," and also know that your admission has gone to maintain employment—it's the play bargain of the year.

A large cast of more than usual interest has been rehearsed by Charles (Blackie) O'Neal until even our critics are mellowed by the reports of it. People like to see their friends on stage when something good comes along and they can say, "See that one? Well, that's m'friend, and we're going backstage later, too." A particularly old Carmel custom, especially on a stage styled by Clay Otto.

In this competent cast the Peninsula joins Carmel, from the Grove, Monterey, the Presidio, the Highlands and way points. Read and recollect.

Robert Macaire is taken by one of Carmel's most experienced actors—Herbert Heron, whom a famous commentator summarized alliteratively: poet, playwright and political potentate. Bertrand, fellow jail-breaker with airy Macaire, is Ross Cowen, the camera portraitist. Into the gaiety of a wedding dinner at M. Dumont's Inn, back there in France only a century ago, these precious two barge, and Hal Garrott, as the inn keeper knows no quiet from then on.

Young Charles is Lucian Jones, of the noted Hopkins Marine Institute, while Ernestine, the girl he is supposed to marry, is Constance Heron. Madame Goriot, mother of Ernestine, is Henrietta Shore, the artist, while the towering Brigadier appears, upon careful study, to be Dr. David Matzke. Bob Parrott, having spent some time in France, is entitled to do the Marquis, while the genial Curate is Mildred Pierson, and his arm-in-arm dinner partner, by contrast, is the thick-tongued Notary, done by Dr. W. B. Williams.

Now, in the other guests, and the Inn's workers, particularly good luck has been had. Among these is Aline, acted by Edwina Pinkham, and the maids, Mary Henderson, Ruth and Betty Pinkham. Gendarmes—those fearless fellows—are Lloyd Weer, Cedric Rowntree, Richard Catlett and Bill Heron. They mingle gallantly with peasants Jane Matzke, Mary Douglass, Millicent Sears, Pauline Meeks, Sonia Gundersen and Bernard Rowntree. Then when the fiddlers—Arthur Gundersen, John Terry and Geraldine O'Connell—strike up a tune, the stage becomes alive with old folk dances.

Get your tickets now and get down to the Sunset School Auditorium for that holiday treat. A treat for you and by you, and the Peninsula public never fails to respond to an invitation such as this.

Carmel's Christmas was unique this year due to the method adopted to handle the extraordinary need presented here. All the local relief agencies were coordinated to avoid duplication, and to see that all needs were supplied. Lists were made from information given out by the Red Cross, Unemployment Agency, Public School, and many citizens were asked to add to it. In this manner, over a hundred families were listed, given numbers, so that those who volunteered to prepare boxes of food to make up the Christmas dinners, could do so in an impersonal yet thorough way. A numbered card was given to the donor, giving the number of adults, ages and sex of the children, so that the need would be accurately met.

Although the primary call was for enough supplies for a Christmas dinner, articles of clothing, toys and practical gifts were contributed.

Posters, publicity and the backing of the local merchants was the basis of the complete success enjoyed by the undertaking. Jo Mora, Catherine Siedeneck, Lawrence Moffett, and Burgdorf made posters; Harry Leon Wilson, Samuel G. Blythe and other prominent writers heartily endorsed the work; while local merchants helped by delivering the many boxes, giving space to the posters, and even in many cases contributing personally themselves.

Many single men and women were on the lists, and these were handled through arrangement with the restaurants, to whom they were given cards for "Carmel's Community Christmas Dinner." In addition, boxes of food, adapted to the need of the particular case were given.

Gordon Campbell spent the holidays with his parents at their Carmel home after graduating from Stanford this quarter.

Peeping Tom? Nay, Says Gus, Not In These Days--Only A Burglar

Carmel had its own bathroom scene the other night.

Kissam Johnson was in the bathtub at her home on Carmelo and Ocean when she suddenly turned around and saw an astonished face glancing in at her through an outside window.

Kissam yelled for help and the Peeping Tom ran for cover. When Traffic Officer Charles Guth arrived on the scene, a search through grounds failed to show any trace of the interloper.

Guth, however, found a ladder which had been placed against the wall of the house near the bathroom window.

Similar reports of the activity of the Peeping Tom have been received from other sections of the village. Police, however, believe that the interloper is much more anxious to burglarize than to pay a hasty glance at the feminine form.

"Peeping Tom? No, not in these days," says Gus, head of the village's police department. "Looks are free. It's loot that they are after!"

Austin James Family On World-Wide Tour

Austin James, Carmel sculptor and his wife, Elinor Minturn James, art critic for the Pine Cone, left yesterday from San Francisco for a six month's trip around the world.

The James will visit the leading art centers of Europe and will spend considerable time studying the sculpture of the ancient Romans and Greeks. They expect to be back in their Carmel home by next June.

Many Gather To Sing Carols At Community Christmas Tree

Lack of rain and a warm south wind helped to make this year's Community Christmas tree party an outstanding success.

Several hundred adults and Carmel youngsters gathered under the tree Christmas eve for the annual singing of carols under the direction of Fenton P. Foster.

Following the singing of carols, Charles Parker of Pine Inn, who donned the red regalia and took the part of Santa Claus, arrived in horse and carriage bringing over 300 pounds of candy for distribution to the youngsters.

The tree which was decorated by George Seideneck, Carmel artist and Jack Belvail, local electrician was acclaimed for its simplicity and for its impressiveness. Much comment and praise was given the two huge candles that were placed at each side of the Christmas tree and which have been burning all week.

Led by Joseph Smith and Rev. T. Harold Grimshaw at the organ, a large group of singers made the rounds after the Community Christmas tree party to the homes of Carmel residents who through illness were confined indoors.

Both the Carmel Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts as well as local merchants cooperated toward making the Christmas party a success.

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Corwin

How quickly Americans reacted in almost every case to domestic products or those manufactured in other countries, except France. Carmel merchants.

Since the failure of France to pay their war debt installment, merchants report an immediate drop in the sale of Parisian merchandise and perfumes.

One Carmel lost a sale last week to a woman customer when she found in the gown she had decided to purchase a label indicating it had come from Paris.

Druggists tell us that the Christmas sale in perfumes was restricted in almost every case to domestic products or those manufactured in other countries, except France.

One merchant lost a sale last week to a woman customer who Made in France tags from foreign goods on sale in her shop. In their place she has put in tags: Made in U.S.A. It might have been just a coincidence, but shortly afterwards, the imported articles began to sell at a surprising rate.

Ever since Helen Ware walked across the stage and screen, she has been successful in dodging bathroom scenes.

Then came a recent call to Hollywood. She accepted the part in the picture. At the last moment the director created a bathroom scene. It was too late to walk out. She went through her act, soap suds and all.

When she returned this week to her home in Carmel she described in vivid terms her Saturday night adventure.

"Imagine," she thundered, "I had to wait all these years to get a bathroom role!"

And here's the reason why authors are getting gray hair:

Rabelais which sold in a Dore illustrated edition for $7.50 now is selling in the east for $1.25. The famous Wild Party privately printed edition which sold for $15.00 can be bought for 89¢—and the supply is unlimited.

The Satyricon of Petronius Arbiter which was published to retail at $25 can now be had for 89¢. And for the elect who come recommended, they can buy by express Lady Chatterly's Lover in the unexpurgated edition for $1.19 delivered to your door!

Yet the books that the censor does not frown at are holding up steadily at their regular prices. One Carmel author who recently had a near best seller, netted a handsome profit of $20,000.

It was a real Christmas weekend for Arthur Hill Gilbert, the artist. He found hanging in his stocking Christmas morn, a portrait of himself done by Austin James, Carmel sculptor.

And by the way, so we are told from an authentic source, that the Carmel matron who recently sued her husband for divorce on the grounds that there were "too many fleas and flies in the house," received a can of flit from an admirer!

EDITORIAL

IN ANSWER TO AN OPEN LETTER

Mr. Paul Flanders, President,
Carmel Land Company:

Dear Mr. Flanders: I have received your letter of December 23, written to "Warn" me against calling a spade a spade. You say, "This is to warn you that should you repeat the above statement in your paper it will be considered by us as a deliberate falsehood published with the express intention maliciously to injure the credit of the Carmel Land Company in this community."

In answer, I say there has been no false statement published by the PINE CONE in this matter; that you and the Carmel Land Company have been more than fairly treated in this controversy over zoning; that instead of malice, our fairness and kindness to you and your company in the handling of the news has been noteworthy; and that any injury "to the credit of the Carmel Land Company in this community" has been through the stand taken by you, not by the reports of that stand in the PINE CONE.

Your objection seems to be that we have called certain places in the proposed zoning map "autocamp sites." According to that map, you have sought a site for a "bungalow court," permitting 14 units to the acre, allowing rentals for less than 48 hours. If you prefer calling this a bungalow court to an autocamp, that is your privilege, but it is merely a matter of definition. We must insist that our definition is a fair one.

You state that you have promised, over your own signature, that no land owned by you, either on the west or east side of the highway will be sold for autocamp purposes. But in the same advertisement which gave that promise, in another paragraph, you stated, "Finally, should it ever appear advisable in future years for the balanced development of this locality, to establish a community center or hotel on land east of the highway, now the property of the Carmel Land Company, we agree that such Home Owners' Association shall pass on the final plans of such development."

This carefully worded promise, which merely gives the property owners' organization the right to pass on the "final plans," not to reject the project, represents exactly the thing that the people of Carmel oppose so strongly. A hotel, whether it be hotel, motel, bungalow court or autocamp, and a community center with stores and shops, from which it would be impossible to exclude hot dog stands, is exactly the sort of "improvement" that Carmel does not want along its approaches. And we call your attention to your own advertisement in the PINE CONE of May 13, 1927, when you were urging sales for residence sites, in Hatton Fields. Then you made a promise that "the restrictions upon Hatton Fields building plots . . . are aimed to prevent the ultimate 'citifying' of this beautiful residence section of Carmel."

Did this promise of 1927 mean anything? Certainly the people who, accepted it, purchased homesites in Hatton Fields had the right to expect freedom from hotels—under whatever name—and community centers. If that promise comes to a disastrous end, how much reliance may the community, and the property owners in Hatton Fields, have in the promises of your advertisements today?

Do not blame the PINE CONE for injur-

MINIATURES

I shall keep some pictures
Till the very day I die:
Eucalyptus silhouettes
Traced against a moonlit sky;
Sheen of spectrum-dew on grass,
Throwing myriad colorings;
Perfect poise of gulls in flight,
Arcs described by rigid wings.

Other pictures come and go;
These remain to charm and bless.
Thieving time can never take Miniatures of loveliness.

NIGHT SONG

When I have lain one long night through
In that last sleep,
There will come restlessness
I will ever keep.
Not having known the silent and dark,
How can I bear that little space;
When will the memory cease of starlit field
And winds against my face!
I must have earth and sky for my release!
How can I reconcile myself when there is rain,
And somewhere brown birds take shelter in a hedge;
How can I close my eyes
And turn back to sleep again!

Helen Louise Jorze

FLIGHT

So suddenly there dropped
A harsh and thrilling cry
From the serenity
Of the infinite sky;
Etched black against the blue,
I saw them once again—
In wedge-like formation flew,
On strong winds borne along,
A wild brave company,
With shrill and clamorous call,
And I gazed wistfully
Upward, until at last
That winged troop fades from sight;
I yearned to heed the lure
Of wild geese in their flight.
Their adventure I would know
In course uncharted, free,
Their wild cries urge me on
"Come break with earth and flee."

Erna E. Hoefs

ing your "credit in this community," Mr. Flanders. We have said repeatedly that we believed you, the officials and stockholders of your company, would work for the general good of the village and have done our best editorially to keep you in good standing in a community that has felt outraged by this attempted zoning. If you have been injured it is because you have not accepted the double responsibility of a duty owed to Carmel and a duty owed to those who have purchased home sites in Hatton Fields.

We say plainly now that the blame for failure of the County Planning Commission to have ready a zoning ordinance for the state highway at Carmel's gates is upon your shoulders. And we say plainly that your warning will not deter the CARMEL PINE CONE from doing its full duty to the community by fastening that responsibility where it belongs.

Very truly yours,

PERRY NEWBERRY, editor.

BUILDING REVIVES

In S. W. Strauss & Co's. monthly national building survey for November, 1932, California for the first time takes first place in the list of states for the total value of building permits issued. New York, always first before, comes second now. The twelve leading states are California, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Ohio, Maryland, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Texas, Washington, D.C., and Louisiana.

Of the cities New York still holds first place, with San Francisco second, Los Angeles fifth, Glendale eleventh, and Long Beach twenty-third. Of the twenty-five cities reporting the largest volume of building for November, four are in California, three in Ohio, two in New York, two in Pennsylvania, two in Minnesota, and the rest are one to a state.

Indications are that the building business is on the way to recovery everywhere, but particularly in California. Throughout the country there was a gain of 2.8% over October, 1932.

THOUGHTS OF CHRISTMAS

A beautiful custom is the Christmas Eve round of the carollers to the homes of the sick, and the joyous serenading under their windows. It's the best antidote for the molligrubs that we know, and will lift a patient out of a sick-bed quicker than a mustard plaster. Here's to a good, old custom, and may it never grow less!

Christmas cards that have individuality are a result of the depression. Ingenuity has to take the place of money. Home-carved wood- and linoleum-blocks, printed in the clothes-wringer, are not only economical, but they are chock-full of personality. The best of this year's output of Christmas greetings are the ones that cost the least.

The open-air Christmas tree has its vicissitudes, as was evidenced last year, but is well worth the risk, as was proven last Saturday evening. With weather conditions right, the ceremonies about the tree, the singing and the Santa Claus, are a beautiful community event. Taken inside a hall, much of the interest would be lost. Better take the risk of a postponement on account of rain than standardize it into the ordinary town-hall tree.

Carmel remains one of the very few towns that makes no use of its Christmas tree to drum up trade for the business district. As the department stores have commercialized and destroyed the illusion of Santa Claus by multiplying the happy-faced old codger until the smallest of his followers loses faith through the mathematical impossibilities, the premature Christmas tree kills its effect and becomes mere advertising.

Thanks of the whole community are owing the committee who took charge of the tree, to the artist who planned its design, to the artisans who placed its lights, to the workers who trimmed it, the merchants who contributed to the presents given out, and to those who assisted in many ways to the success of Christmas Eve.

People Talked About

The Paris edition of the New York Herald had portraits of Jane Gallatin Powers and Miss Madeleine Uhlman in its rotogravure section recently, with a story of the former's art work in Capri and Paris, where she has studios and divides her time. The island of Capri is in the bay of Naples, overlooking that wonderful Italian city. Its mayor is Don Marino Dusmet, third son of the Duke of Dusmet, the husband of Mrs. Powers' daughter, formerly of Carmel. Miss Madeleine Uhlman, also of Carmel, lives with them at Capri.

Mrs. Jane Gallatin Powers is the widow of the late Frank Powers, who with J. F. Devendorf, founded Carmel a quarter of a century ago. The family lived on North San Antonio street, where is now the home of the J. A.

Mackenzies. Mrs. Powers is an active supporter of the art activities of the American Women's Club of Paris.

From Juneau, Alaska, come the season's greetings from Jack and Sasha Calvin. Jack Calvin, who wrote "Full Rigged" and "Fisherman 28," adventure books for boys, but also of tense interest to adults as well, is evidently gathering material for more stories of the kind he loves. They left Carmel to buy a boat in Seattle, and make their life on it in Alaskan waters.

At a time when many intellectuals are flirting with the Reds, the Bookman's editorial, "When Are Authors Insulted?" in a recent number is illuminating. Written in answer to a letter from Sherwood Anderson, Waldo Frank, James Rorty, William Jones and Elliot E. Cohen, who evidently expected quite different answers to the four questions they asked in it, the old and influential Bookman puts the case squarely and honestly before them and its readers.

In their letter, the writers set forth the circumstances of a visit they paid the White House to protest to President Hoover against his use of Federal troops in evicting the Bonus army. The President refused to see them, and sent an assistant secretary to the job of receiving the protest.

Anderson, Frank, et al were properly insulted, and wrote their grievance to the Bookman, saying, "As literary critic and editor, you must believe that our writers are the wakeners and creators of the conscience of the nation. You must believe in the dignity and high office of the writing profession. We appeal to you as public defenders of that dignity in asking you the following questions."

The questions, with the answer to each from the Bookman's editor, are as follows:

1. Do you not think that President Hoover's refusal to see a delegation of American writers, while he receives delegations of children, is an insult to the authors of America?

Answer: Certainly not. It is an insult to the authors of America for some of them to pose as representatives of their profession for the purpose of furthering a particular cause, in this case the cause of Communism.

2. Do you not think that the whole incident demonstrated the inferior position of writers as a class hold in America today?

Answer: As a class, no. But it did very nicely demonstrate just why a large number of writers hold, and deserve to hold, an inferior position in America today; namely, because they are so chuckle-headed they can see nothing to do with their righteous indignation at modern industrial society but to put it at the service of the sham cure of Communism; to engage in all the infantile tactics of Communist propaganda, such as pretending they are interested in the veterans getting their bonus, trying to conceal themselves in "innocent clubs" like the National Committee for the Defence of Political Prisoners, trying to see the President without an appointment to read him a "protest" consisting doubtless of misstatements, humanitarian balderdash, and a sprinkling of the horrendous Communist jargon; and then crying to heaven when their plans are balked, and acting as though it were a grave insult to Communists to be reported as going to a Communist headquarters, or to children to be treated like children.

3. Do you not think this is in a large measure due to the indifference of authors and critics to the burning social questions of the day, and their conviction that they, as writers, are not concerned with such problems?

Answer: The writers we speak of are not indifferent to burning social questions; they are merely stupid about them.

4. Do you not think that these questions are worthy and important enough to the cause of American literature to merit discussion from you and your readers?

Answer: No more than the above; except to linger for a moment to remember sadly the contributions of Sherwood Anderson and Waldo Frank to American literature, and to wonder what James Rorty, William Jones and Elliot E. Cohen may have done for the cause.

With a "Merry Christmas," Maynard Dixon sends along the correct wording of Charles K. Field's "classic," which I misquoted miserably in my autobiography a week ago. It runs,

"The preachers say God spanked the town

For getting over-frisky;
Then why did He shake the churches down

And save Hotaling's whisky?"

My memory is getting weak, I fear, otherwise I could not lose so much of the point in my wording of the verse. These rambling reminiscences that go under the ironic heading, "Newberry's Authentic Autobiography," are hurriedly written, without any notes or memoranda to refresh memory. But this doesn't excuse misquoting a poet to the extent of spoiling his verse, and I make humble apology.

Newberry's Authentic Autobiography

XXXII

Abe Ruef was being tried for his crimes in a Hebrew synagogue which on week days was a court of justice, a church on Sundays, one of the exigences of the earthquake and fire. I went to see the trial next morning, but found myself locked out, the doors having been closed when the pews were all filled with spectators. I was turning away, disappointed, when Ruef came up between his two guards, the McCarthy boys, Jack and Dan, and almost bumped into me. We shook hands and exchanged brief greetings for the prisoner was awaited inside, then Ruef said,

"Did you want to get in, Perry?"

"Thought I'd like to, yes," I replied.

"Come in with us. I've a reserved seat up in front," he offered, "and they'll find you a chair next me." He grinned, and I followed the little procession up the aisle and to the pulpit which served as the Judge's bench, getting a place at the press table.

Ex-mayor Eugene E. Schmitz testified that morning, but as he was himself awaiting trial upon similar charges to the ones Ruef faced, he wasn't telling much, and the questions asked were more interesting than the answers given. To most of them he pleaded the right to refuse an answer that might incriminate him. I was pleased with Heney's hammer-and-tongs method of examination, and the efforts of the defense attorneys to "get the goat" of the famous attorney. Heney, when mad, was said to lose his head completely, and it was the constant effort of his legal opponents to enrage him. That they did not oftener succeed speaks well for Heney's nerves.

I saw considerable of that trial and of subsequent ones during the next two years, while the grafters were being prosecuted, and was in court when Heney was shot by a jury venireman, one of the most thrilling courtroom scenes in my experience. Heney was a bold and fearless prosecutor, showing no favoritism for wealth, and treating recalcitrant witnesses with absolute disregard of their pride or power. There was no worse hated man in San Francisco than Francis J. Heney. The shot that pierced his head—fortunately through the cheeks and mouth—was aimed by scores of his enemies rather than by the man who pulled the trigger. All the "higher-ups," fearing him, dreading the long terms in prison that faced them, hating the man who persisted in the prosecutions, sought his suppression by any means, fair or foul.

Which was the battle our Regular Republican League had to fight at the summer primaries. Back from the mines, away from the activities for many months, I had to adjust myself to a situation that was as strange as any that ever had happened in politics. I learned my first lesson at the big, general meeting of district leaders that I called together as a preliminary to organization.

I wanted our party to start its campaign with an avowal of its determination to continue the prosecutions until the last and highest "higher-up" had had his day in court. I found plenty of opposition to the adoption of such a pledge, it was argued and discussed, with all the reasons of "hurting business," of "handicapping rebuilding," and the specious pleas of the bribers given weight by their advocates. A vote would have killed my motion, so I withdrew it for the moment, and we took up other matters.

But without that plank in our platform, there was no reason to my thinking for going into the fight. As the night wore on, and men began leaving for their homes, I held back by a whispered word those friends of mine who were for the continued prosecutions. And when a count of noses of those remaining showed me that the time had come, I again made my motion and it carried. In the San Francisco newspapers next morning, the Regular Republican League, with Daniel A. Ryan its president, had gone on record, by resolution, as favoring the continuation of the prosecutions to the last "higher-up," for justice alike to rich and poor, bribed and the briber, and for William H. Langdon its district attorney, with Francis J. Heney, his chief of staff. Those who had left the meeting early were surprised, and most of them never came back to us.

But now we knew our friends, and our enemies. The delegates we selected in each district for our tickets were the men who wanted San Francisco cleaned of its corruption. I gave those lists more than careful inspection that there might not be "ringers" upon them, and made changes enough so that I knew that I could control the convention if we won. We would win, for the people en masse are honest, and when an issue is clearly drawn between right and wrong, will vote for the right. They can be fooled, yes; they are not certain of decision in complicated matters; but our platform was simple and straightforward. I felt that we had won the battle when we passed our resolution favoring the prosecution.

Nor did our party ever waver in its loyalty to the prosecution, to Langdon and Heney, although the prosecution as represented by Rudolph Spreckles, its financial backer and self-styled leader, tossed us high in air even before the primaries were over. Without consulting us, Spreckles named Edward Robeson Taylor for mayor in place of Schmitz, the convicted. The supervisors, under his lash, made the appointment valid. A man of high character, dean of the medical college, leader of the bar association, a poet of rare ability, a fine citizen and a pioneer of San Francisco, Taylor had all the qualifications for the job except that he was inexperienced, was over trustful, and was a democrat. The appointment of a democrat during a republican primary campaign was a direct slap at our organization, and made the going less easy.

When I expostulated with Spreckles, I was told that the appointment was merely a stop-gap, that there was no intention to embarrass us, and that we should go ahead with our plans, with them firmly behind us. We accepted his statement, especially as we were sure that Heney, Langdon and Burns were working with us. But before the primaries, Dan Ryan, George Van Smith, political editor of the Call, and I made plans for a radical change of the program.

The San Francisco Morning Call, owned by John D. Spreckles, brother of Rudolph, was the one newspaper in the city that had remained firmly behind the prosecution, falling not at all for the "hurting San Francisco" doctrine. George Van Smith, red-headed, young, vital, a Harvard man with eastern political experience, was sitting in our most intimate councils, and had our full confidence. The three of us, Van Smith, Dan and I determined that if we carried the primaries, we would attempt a union of the Republican, Democratic and Union Labor delegates in one general convention that would name a single candidate for mayor of San Francisco, so obviating a bitter battle of the polls. This was a time when, if ever in the city's history, unity of action was needed and not destructive fighting. And in that massed convention, we would nominate William H. Langdon for district attorney.

THE VILLAGE NEWS-REEL

Coming into Carmel on Christmas eve, Carmel residents and visitors were enchanted by the beautiful Christmas tree and decorations staged dramatically at the foot of the hill. Not even snow could have held quite so much Christmas spirit and beauty as the Carmel community tree with a huge pair of candles underneath it. It has been voted that this is one of the most spectacular trees Carmel has ever had. One person said that he almost took his hands off the wheel of the car to applaud the attractive scene as he drove into Carmel.

James Broughton, who during the summer contributed to the Pine Cone—everyone misses his column "The Soup Ladle"—came down from Stanford to spend the Christmas holidays with his mother, rs. Olga Wood, at her home on Camino Real in Carmel.

Bill Argo, who for a long time lived in Carmel with his mother, Mrs. Hilda Argo, came down to spend the holidays with Stuart Marble at his Carmel home.

Mrs. Grace Glenn of Carmel was visited by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Glenn of San Diego, for a week. Mr. Glenn is a well known attorney of San Diego, being a member of the firm of Senator Wright, McKee and Glenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Masten at their Carmel Highlands home, entertained for dinner on Christmas night, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Lusignan of Monterey.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Hanchett recently made a short visit to Carmel after motoring down from their Saratoga home to visit local friends.

Mrs. Betty Jean Downing returned last week from a business trip to San Francisco. Mrs. Downing also went to San Francisco over Christmas weekend.

Cynthia and Dick Criley who spend their summers on the peninsula, shared the holidays with their mother Mrs. Theodore Criley at their Carmel Highlands home. Dick is another one of the local Stanford students.

Carmel Asks For Federal Loan To Help Unemployed

Carmel may get $22,500 for relief among unemployed families under a plan authorized last week by the board of supervisors which would result in a loan of $239,850 for the entire county from the Federal Reconstruction Corporation.

The authorization of the loan was made by the supervisors and immediately forwarded to Governor James Rolph who in turn will relay it to the Washington headquarters of the reconstruction corporation.

According to Argyll Campbell, city attorney for Carmel and one of the leaders in the drive, there was every indication that Carmel and other Monterey county communities would receive the money. The amounts allocated, however, may be much lower than those requested and the probability is that Carmel will get $5,000 instead of the $22,500 asked.

Campbell pointed out that not only would the loan materially aid conditions throughout the county, but it would not have to be repaid by the tax payers. The loan would be made in the place of the annual federal appropriation for state roads.

The entire amount of $239,000 was determined by a survey of the county which revealed that there are approximately 2675 unemployed who must be taken care of during the next year. Minimum requirements for each family was set at $25 a month for a period of six months.

In Carmel, it was estimated that there are 75 families who would need the $25 a month.

Vienna Boy Choir Opens Carmel Music Society

Those who heard the broadcast of the Vienna Boy Choir on Christmas Eve are not going to miss the concert of the Carmel Music Society on January 14, when that community organization opens its sixth annual season with this famous ensemble of twenty-two boys voices.

The singing boys continue to capture city after city as they tour toward California. Of one of their concerts in New York just before they started West, the World-Telegram music critic wrote: "The immense audience last evening was wildly enthusiastic and with reason."

To the long list of several hundred music lovers of the Peninsula who have reserved single or series reservations is now added the following, who become members of the Carmel Music Society as endorsers of the concert season:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Aldrich, Miss Elizabeth Allcott, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Bardarson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bardin, Mrs. Sumter Earl, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Filippello, Miss Mary Elizabeth Gloeckner, Mrs. Charles Kiernan, Miss Rosalie M. Kimball, Mr. A. Klue-gel, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kuster, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. McCarthy, Peter Pan Lodge, Mrs. Edwin G. Pinkham, Miss Ruth Radcliff, Miss Marie Rasmussen, Miss Ernestine Renzel, Dr. and Mrs. Dean Seabrook, Mrs. Donald Stanford, Mrs. H. W. Toulmin, Mrs. Mary J. Wilkeson.

Blue Bird Tea Garden Merges with Blue Bird

For the winter months Sammy Sampson's Blue Bird Tea Garden will be closed while Miss Sampson herself will welcome her patrons and friends at her mother's tea room on Ocean avenue. Along with the regular meals at the Blue Bird Tea Room, Miss Sampson will continue with her Tea Garden service.
